

St Collen's Church Proposed Improvements

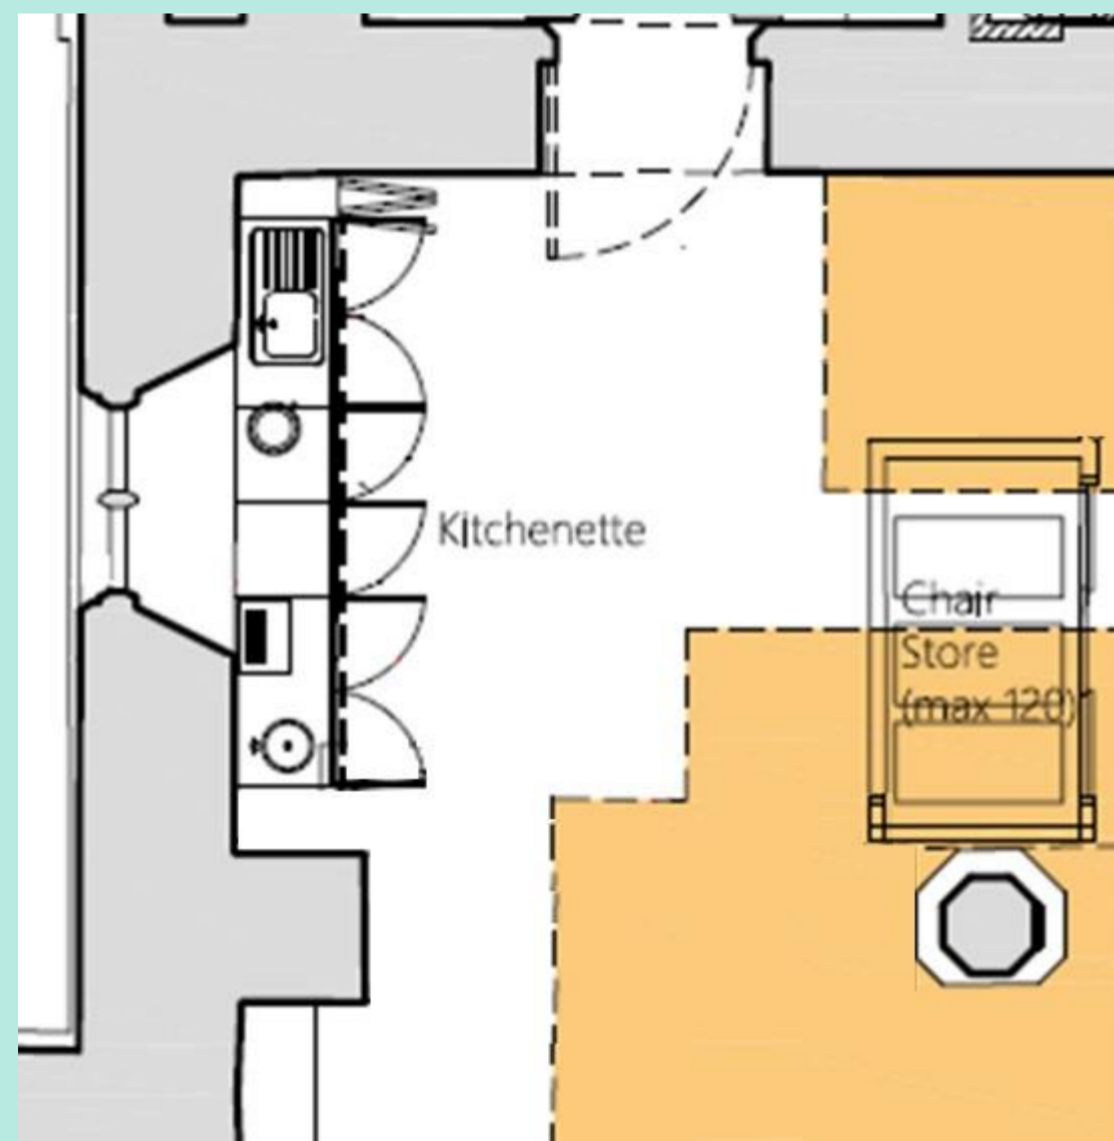

The vestry as it is at present.

Install a disabled toilet

A disabled toilet would be installed in the north end of what is presently the choir vestry. People would then be able to use this, either in services or during functions in the Church, without having to go over to the Church Hall and back.

The possible layout of the new toilet and one possibility of how it may look.

Install a small independent kitchen unit

The plan is to install a small fold away kitchen area, at the west end of the north aisle, where the font is presently located. The font would be re-sited in the nave next to the south entrance.

Pews in the north aisle would be removed, creating a usable space where people could stand or where chairs and tables could be put out.

Having the possibility to make drinks and food items independently of the kitchen in the Church Hall will increase the flexibility of use for both the Church and the Hall and allow different events to be hosted simultaneously.
